

2014 Annual Academic Conference

Department of Physics and Astronomy
2014

Annual Academic Conference of the Department of Physics and Astronomy is a grand occasion for all the department members to exhibit their research achievements, and to promote the academic exchanges and cooperation within the department. Four such conferences had been held since 2010. The 2014 Annual Academic Conference is scheduled on Saturday, June 14, 2014. All the members of the faculty and staff as well as graduate students are required to attend the conference except for some special cases. Those who cannot participate should obtain permission from the organizing committee in advance.

Directors of research institutes/centers are in charge of the recommendation of oral talks and screened posters, with lists and abstracts subject to the requested number of the talks and the posters (see appendices), to the organizing committee. Graduate students are encouraged to present their posters. After collecting all the oral talks, the organizing committee will select three 40-minute talks and some 20-minute talks. The top five of posters of graduate students are elected by the committee as the annual commendation of the posters of the graduate students.

The organization of the conference is scheduled as follows:

- The first-round announcement is given in May 15.
- Research Institutes/Centers submit the recommendation lists of those talks and posters to the organizing committee in May 28.
- A list of the talks and the posters is announced in May 30.
